GOT HIS PEN FROM CHICAGO

Promotion work was the cause of one of Honolulu's residents having his expensive Waterman fountain pen returned to him. Previous to his coming to these islands, he left his pen in an office in Chicago—he was not sure where—and he gave it up as lost. But he had promised to write to a young lady there and tell her all about these delightful beauty spots. Somehow or another he unobtrusively overlooked the promise, because he was too busy with politics, or something of that kind, and hence the lady who had found his pen could not return it to him because she did not know his address.

After political campaigning was over, he took to promotion work and suddenly he sent a batch of postal cards to all the addresses he had jotted down. The lady, who was holding the pen, got one of them, and immediately she returned the pen. He had been without it for fourteen months. He believes in the old adage that it pays to advertise.

THE MIKADO A GREAT SUCCESS

The first performance of the "Mikado" on Friday evening, like all first performances, in reality but a full dress rehearsal, was but the fore-runner of a better one which was given by the local talent.

The three performances, including the matinee on Saturday afternoon were played to crowded houses, rejoicing the promoters, the entertainers, and the audiences who recognize latent talent in their friends, were very enthusiastic and appreciative.

The solos were in every instance cleverly interpreted, and many little "business" points were introduced in all the performances, which, with local hits sung by "Ko-Ko" met with enthusiastic approval.

Each principal and each member of the chorus, in sympathy with the cause, deserved the greatest possible credit for successful effort.

The spirit of good-will, perfect harmony and union throughout was very noticeable, and tended to create a similar attitude in the front of the house.

The indefatigable efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Hughes and Mr. Kipling, who inspired the members of the cast with dramatic possibilities, were amply rewarded.

A. B. Arleigh & Co. announce a most successful business in Grady rebuilt typewriters. These machines seem to afford the greatest of satisfaction. They are rebuilt in a factory specially equipped for this kind of work, where all parts even slightly worn are replaced with new parts, thus making the machines, for all practical purposes, as good as new. They also carry a complete stock of Remington parts and can effect repairs on short notice.
